Somebody's Darling.

[The following lines were written in 1864, by Mrs. E. G. Sprague, now of Wyoming, R. I., and first appeared in the Waverly Magazine. They were suggested by seeing a young drummer-boy lying dead in Lovell General Hospital, at Portsmouth Grove, R. I.]

Into a ward of the white-washed halls,
Where the dead and the dying lay
Wounded by bayonet, shells and balls,
Somebody's darling was borne one day.
Somebody's darling! so young and so brave
Wearing yet on his pale, sweet face,
Soon to be hid by the dust of the grave,
The lingering light of his boyhood's grace.

Matted and damp are the curls of gold,
Kissing the snow of that fair young brow;
Pale are the lips of delicate mold,—
Somebody's darling is dying now.
Back from the beautiful, blue-veined brow
Brush all the wandering waves of gold;
Cross his hands on his bosom now,—
Somebody's darling is still and cold!

Kiss him once—for somebody's sake;
Murmur a prayer, soft and low;
One bright curl from its fair mates take,—
They were somebody's pride you know.
Somebody's hand hath rested there!
Was it a mother's, soft and white?
And have the lips of a sister dear
Been baptized in those waves of light?

God knows best! he was somebody's love;
Somebody's heart enshrined him there;
Somebody wafted his name above,
Night and morn, on the wings of prayer.
Somebody wept when he marched away,
Looking so handsome, brave and grand;
Somebody's kiss on his forehead lay;
Somebody clung to his parting hand.

Somebody's waiting and watching for him,
Yearning to hold him again to her heart;—
And there he lies with his blue eyes dim,
And his smiling, childlike lips apart.
Tenderly bury the fair, young dead,
Pausing to drop in his grave a tear;
Carve on the wooden slab at his head,
"Somebody's darling slumbers here."

The Country Doctor.

Dr. Brinsley belongs to the noble army of martyrs and heroes known as "country doctors." He was the sort of man you could love if you loved him; otherwise you would probably dislike him, for he was very peculiar; everybody said so. Now there are several ways of being peculiar, and the doctor's ways were not always pleasant ways—unless you loved him. His wife had loved him, and to her he had seemed the most perfect of men. He suited her and she suited him, and they had been very happy. It must not be supposed that her love had been of the cooing kind. Perhaps the doctor would not have enjoyed that. Darling Becky rejoiced in making bright, spicy, impudent remarks to her husband. Remarks which made his big brown eyes sparkle with delight; then he would meet her half way, and they would fight the most interesting little duels, followed by the most affectionate reconciliations. But it was now three long years since poor Becky had been resting in her quiet grave and the doctor's friends had decided that he needed some one to keep house for him.

After much persuasion he had been particularly introduced to Miss Delia Swan. "What a name!" thought the doctor, but as he looked at her he saw that she was fair, gentle, healthy and twenty-six. "A good, sensible age; must be neat and orderly," was his verdict. In a moment of enthusiastic selfishness he had proposed to her, and in a moment of enthusiastic devotion she had accepted him.

They were married. She lived in his house, she poured out his tea and coffee, she entertained his friends, and everybody said: "Oh, how much nicer she was than that other woman!" She was very popular with everybody, but she was not at all popular with the doctor.

To him "that other woman" was still all the world and the brightness thereof. So homeless did he feel in the presence of this much nicer woman that his visits to Becky's grave were the only happy hours of his new life. After awhile he became more accustomed to Delia, and then he began to give her free and frequent lectures on Becky. "She" used to say so and so, she used to do this and that, and as she had been right then, she must be right now and forever, and in everything.

Delia had married "from a sense of duty," and deserved to be punished, but it seemed to her that her punishment was greater than she deserved. She would not have wished that her husband should forget the wife of his youth, but she had expected that he would have some regard for the woman whom he had invited to preside over his household, and she had hoped to make him comfortable; to "do her duty by him," as she expressed it. Part of that duty she had performed in the most admirable manner; never had the doctor's house been so clean; never had his shirt bosoms shone with such luster; but the heart which beat behind them she had been unable to conquer.

Was it her fault? Had she not tried to be kind, to be patient, to be meek? Yes, but it was the trying that had spoiled it all and she lacked the sweet boldness which love alone can give. She was almost afraid of that ungracious man, and she was jealous of Becky, much loved, happy Becky. At the end of six months of such a life the doctor noticed that Delia looked pale and thin. "You need a little more fresh air," he prescribed, "and I shall take you out as often as I can." Not without some inward fear, but attired in her very best, Delia sat in the buggy by the side of her lord. It was a balmy spring afternoon, nature looked so fresh, so bright, so happy, that a little of this happiness breathed itself into Delia's sad heart. The doctor must also have been touched by these benign influences, for never before had he been so kind, so attentive to her, so talkative. She smiled several times; twice she absolutely laughed. She sat a little nearer to him, her cheeks bloomed and she was beginning to feel quite comfortable, when, as luck would have it, they happened to ride past a very small cottage, so very small that Delia said, "Oh, look! I wonder how people live in such a tiny bit of a house?"

The doctor's brow grew dark. "In such a house as this," he said in his most impressive manner, "in just such a house as this my wife and I lived in the greatest happiness when we were first married."

Had Delia been suddenly shifted from India's coral strand to Greenland's icy mountains the shock could hardly have been greater. "His wife," she thought, "then if she is his wife, what am I?" Peculiar reasoning, perhaps, but Delia knew very well what she meant. All that evening she sat silently sewing and answering the doctor's remarks with a primness of dignity that surprised him. But he asked no questions and took refuge in thoughts of the old days when Becky sat in that same chair, sewing too, but with such bright, loving looks, such an interesting way of saying things! And now, what a difference! What, in truth, was this woman to him? Not a wife, not even a companion, only a housekeeper. And he gazed at her reflectively. It so happened that Delia, who had been making desperate efforts to overcome her sulky mood, looked up at that moment and caught the full meaning of the doctor's eyes. Had he slapped her face she could not have felt it more, but she gave no sign. With white fingers that trembled a little she folded her work and said, "I am tired, I will go to my room."

Delia did not sleep much that night. "I must leave him," she decided at last. "I will not live with him unless I am really his wife. I cannot." Leave him; but how? She would not go back to her mother's house where questions would be asked which she was determined not to answer; and besides it was too near. Where could she go? A few hours afterwards that question was answered. She received a letter postmarked "Denver, Colorado;" it came from "dear cousin Mamie," and as she read her letter Delia's face brightened; "it is just what I wanted," she said to herself.

One evening, when the doctor came home, Bridget met him at the door and said, "Missus has gone, sir; she had to go a kind of sudden, but she said she would write and tell you." "All right," answered the doctor. "Gone to her mother's," he explained to himself. "I suppose there is some sort of fandango going on there." He made himself very comfortable. It was a cool evening, and he smoked his cigar, and put his feet on the stove, with "no one nigh to hinder." But what the doctor really liked was to be hindered; he enjoyed watching the mild shadow of disapproval stealing over Delia's face; if she had frankly and briskly expressed her opinion, then taken it back prettily, he might have fallen in love with her; but Delia always relapsed into meekness, and all was lost. As the days passed the doctor began to miss his housekeeper. "Why does she not write? Cold-blooded creature!"

The cold-blooded creature wrote. Her letter was dated from Denver. It said:

DEAR SIR—I thought you would be happier without me, so I came here. I am visiting cousin Mamie. With best wishes for your happiness, I remain sincerely,

DELIA BRINSLEY.

"A pretty letter—and 'dear sir' to me! Gone to Denver! Who could have supposed she had spirit enough for that? Little goose! Gone to Denver, by Jove!"

The doctor laughed, he blessed himself, he was delighted. The next evening he was on his way to Colorado. That same evening, in far-off, lovely Denver, Delia and Cousin Mamie were comparing notes about their husbands. Delia had been very cautious and Mamie was enthusiastic about the doctor. "If he was my husband I would flirt with him and make him fall desperately in love with me," she declared.

"Flirt with him!" exclaimed Delia.

"Certainly, it would be all right, and so interesting! Now, John is so good natured and always the same, I sometimes wish he would be a little bit cross, just for a change."

"What a sadly funny world this is," thought Delia when she was alone, "no one is really contented and happy." Then she became very homesick; not only did she miss the doctor, but she also missed herself, she had always been so prudent, so submissive, and now she had done such a wild, wicked thing! Had she not promised "for better and for worse?"

One morning there came a tremendous ring at the door. Delia knew that ring, she heard it all over her and turned pale. "Bound to get in," said Mamie, as she hurried to the door. "Is Mrs. Brinsley in?" asked a big voice. Mrs. Brinsley was in. She came forward smiling, rosy-cheeked, collected and transformed. She held out her hand; she was glad to see the doctor; she presented him to Cousin Mamie. They sat down. "Where are you stopping?" asked Delia. "At the Windsor." And she became as deeply interested in the Windsor as if the doctor had come expressly for the purpose of ending his days there. But Dr. Brinsley was not altogether defenseless. "I came to see if you would take a ride with me. The carriage is at the door. Come just as you are."

"Oh!" said Delia. And she went.

The mountains were "perfectly magnificent," as Delia remarked, but the doctor made quick work of them.

"How soon will you be ready to come home?" he asked quietly.

"I don't know. I intended to stay all summer. I think—I think—" But she could not tell him what she thought. She was glad he had come; she wanted to go back with him; she loved him, now. But did he love her? If he would only be a little more gentle, more lover-like. The doctor was not very gentle; his manner was clear cut and decided, but—if she would only have looked at him!

"How soon will you come home?" he repeated. "I want you to come home."

Then, slowly, she lifted up her eyes to his. Was this the way he used to look at Becky? Not quite; no one should ever see that look again in the doctor's eyes. But Delia did not know that, and it seemed very good to her to be looked at in this way. "I will go whenever you like," she answered at last.

Then the doctor did say something gentle and lover-like.

They were married already. Let us hope "they were happy ever afterwards."

Some Strange Beliefs.

The Chinese hill tribes believe that man has only three souls, and these are satisfactorily disposed of. One appropriately and conveniently remains in the grave, another takes up his position at the ancestral board, and the third roams about unrestrained in the spirit world, and not necessarily upon earth. Many of the hill women are fond, as in India, of giving their dead child a dog, or (by dint of prayers and supplications) the departed spirit of an old and experienced person as a guide, that the wanderer may not miss its way on the path to the spirit world. For this reason it was that the Mongolians sent slaves to accompany their dead princes. The Chinese, however, have a more humane idea. They believe that since it is likely that the dead man will be unable to find his way safely to the world of spirits, and may as probably as not stray from the right path, the kings of the under world would furnish him with a little devil to act the part of guide and servant to the newly-disembodied spirit on its journey. The Poles used to have a notion of a similar kind, though they, like the Chinese, did not display it in such an unpleasant way for survivors. It was their custom to lay bears' claws in the grave to serve the dead man as hooks, with the help of which he might climb the great glass mountain. According to the common notion among the Karens the dead renew as "plu-pho" in the world of Plu, under the sovereignty of the great King Cootay or Theedo, the occupations which they had followed while as yet mortals upon earth—a curious hint at the caste system of the Hindoos, which has no place with the Karenns while they are alive.—[Cornhill Magizine.

VERY DANGEROUS.

Visit to a Nitro-Glycerine Factory.—A Place Where Men's Lives Are in Constant Danger.

Near the village of Tweed, Canada, and at the water's edge of Stoco Lake, is a fair-sized, unpretentious, isolated wooden building, the appearance of which would cause a stranger to inquire why a good building was erected in such an isolated locality, and it was so closely guarded, as a solitary watchman, day and night the year round, checks the steps and inquires the business of the curious as they stray near. As the eye passing upwards reads "Nitro-glycerine factory—very dangerous," in big letters above the door, the use for which the building is intended and the necessity for watchful care is apparent. At the door were seen lying iron casks sheeted inside with lead, and in these casks are imported the pure glycerine and mixed acids used in the factory.

A cask of mixed acid is hoisted by machinery to the upper story and dumped into a mixing tub, in which the mixing blades are turned by a man who is stationed in a tight box and has in front of him a thermometer. As the glycerine runs into the acid a vapor is engendered in which life is scarcely supportable, hence the man at the crank is stationed in a close box. The acid and glycerine in their admixture rapidly heat, and the compound has to be toned down by cold water or ice; hence the greatest watchfulness is necessary at this point. As the heat is allowed to run up to 80 degrees, and nitro-glycerine explodes at 90 degrees, there remains but 10 degrees of heat between the men and eternity, or, as the manager remarked, if the heat run up to 90 degrees they would not have time to pucker their mouths to say "good-by."

It is needless to say that, while the work is going on, strangers are never allowed to enter the building, as it is necessary that every man should have his individual attention at such times upon his work. "Strict rules govern our men," remarked the manager, "as the least venture at experimenting would leave no one to tell how the accident happened." The nitro-glycerine thus manufactured has an explosive force ten times greater than that of blasting powder, and is used on very heavy work, but we sell very little in that shape, remarked the manager, as it is run down a tunnel to the room below, where it is manufactured into dynamite, daulin or vigorite, all of which have nitro-glycerine as their basis, but are known by different names to designate the degree of power. As rapidly as possible, the nitro-glycerine is mixed with charcoal, wood pulp, or other mixtures, and reduced into a commodity more readily handled; for although dynamite is understood to be extremely dangerous to handle, it is rammed into the cartridges with a stick with as little apparent fear of the result as would be the case were the substance so much dirt.

The cartridges are made to hold from a pound to two pounds each, and are carefully packed each day and taken to an isolated magazine owned by the company. The output of the factory is about 1000 pounds daily now, but the owners expect to increase the capacity to meet the requirements of a rapidly increasing demand, as this is the only factory of the kind in Ontario, and the development of the mines has rapidly increased the demand, as blasting with powder has been almost entirely superseded by the use of dynamite, which is not only more efficacious but safer to handle. The manager remarked: "I have to pay my men large salaries, although the work is comparatively light, as a very slight accident would put them out of the way of drawing their salaries. I have worked at the business for the past five years, and own a mill in Algoma as well as this one here, but in this business life is the result of vigilance."—[Manufacturer's Gazette.

GLASS EYES.

How These Delicate Optical Delusions Are Made.

Artificial eyes are not of recent invention, for the early Egyptians used many crude specimens, the erblephari and the hypoblepharia. The former was formed of a circle of iron which passing round the head had at one of its extremities a thin sheet of metal covered with very fine skin, on which was painted an eye with eye-lid and lashes, thus forming a kind of painted bandage which concealed the cavity of the lost eye. The latter exhibited somewhat of a likeness to the method now adopted, but was made of a metallic shell something like a walnut shell on which was painted the iris, the pupil and the white of the eye, and was placed in the orbital cavity and kept in place by the eyelids as is now done. The great objection to this was the weight of the metal and the constant fixity of the look.

The data of the introduction of glass eyes is not recorded, but they have been found in the heads of mummies staring with unearthly light. In olden days solid glass eyes were used, but the artificial eye of to-day is of shell-like formation, and in its construction remarkable nicety and skill is required.

With the exception of a few small modifications in detail and finish, the manufacture of artificial eyes has not made any particular steps forward in the last half century. Each manufacturer has a secret of his own as to the combination of the material used and the mode of applying them. This secret, which in most cases is handed down from father to son, is jealously guarded, and strangers are rarely permitted to witness any of the processes of manufacture. The artificial eye being only a light shell of enamel without any precise form, since it has to be suited to the different sizes and shapes of eyeballs, is placed under the eyelid, and is composed of two parts; the one exterior, which gives the colors of the iris, of the sclerotic, or white on the eye, as well as the blood-vessels of the healthy eye; the other, the interior, which fitting into and capping the stump, receives movement from it. The manufacture of artificial eyes consists in three distinct operations, as follows:

The artist seats himself at his table with a lamp or gas jet before him which is blown by a bellows and blow-pipe, worked by the foot, and gives a pointed jet of flame of the strength he desires. Within reach of his hand are placed rods of enamel of different colors. He begins by taking a hollow tube of colorless crystal, one of the extremities of which being soon melted in the fire of the jet forms a ball when blown. As the color given by the crystal has no resemblance to that of the sclerotic, usually called the white of the eye, his first labor is to color the ball in such a manner that it may be of the same hue as the natural eye. To attain this result, he applies to the ball, enamel of different colors which amalgamating with the crystal in a pasty state, gradually gives it the desired tint, which differs in each individual. This tint obtained, he makes a circular opening in the center of the ball, destined to receive the globe of the eye. When the hole is made the ball is put on one side. The globe is made by first forming the iris, which is done by the use of several amalgamations of enamel according to requirements of the case. The iris finished, a spot of black ename is placed in the center to form the pupil, which is then encircled with its aureola. The infinitely small fibers found in the iris are then drawn.

The globe when finished is soldered to the sclerotic by means of the lamp, after which the artist rectifies any small imperfections which he may observe, and it only remains to pare the ball in order to obtain a shell, which, rounded at the edges, may perfectly resemble the living eye with which it is to be placed, not only in form but also in color. The enameled surface of a well-made eye is really lovely, and when even closely examined it has every appearance of the natural, eye both in brilliancy, depth, and light.

Prices vary from $15 to $50, according to circumstances, although all are equally well finished.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

A felicity that costs pain gives double content.

Money is well spent in purchasing tranquility of mind.

There is no deeper law of nature than that of change.

Indolence is the rust of the mind and the inlet of every vice.

A passionate woman's love is always overshadowed by her fear.

Wrong none by doing injuries, or omitting the benefits that are your duty.

Time should never be squandered. Every man should have a noble, worthy aim in life.

There will always be something that we shall wish to have finished, and be, nevertheless, unwilling to begin.

A good man will be doing good wheresoever he is. His trade is a compound of charity and justice.

Foolishness places itself in the foremost rank to be observed; intelligence stands in the hindmost to observe.

There is always hope in a man that actually and earnestly works. In idleness alone is there perpetual despair.

If you wish to appear agreeable in society, you must consent to be taught many things which you know already.

The Mining Prospector.

The genus prospector, a man of medium hight, a rather lightly but firmly-knit frame, age anywhere between twenty-five and thirty-five, a fine face, gentle but firm, bronzed with exposure to many a fierce storm, stamped with the unmistakable expression impressed on the features of those who, day after day, stand face to face with danger and death, a face that a girl in distress will turn to without hesitation; that a rowdy will turn from with fear and hatred. His first movement betrays the frontiersman. A rapid piercing glance around the park, neither human foe nor edible game being in sight, his next glance is to the sky. Apparently satisfied with the inspection, his first care is to tend to his jack or "burro," to use the mountain phrase; then having liberated the burro with a drag on the end of his rope which will effectually prevent his straying from that park, he turns to his fire, blows it into a blaze, puts on his coffee pot to boil, and then to his toilet. Three inches of comb, two square inches of looking glass, a coarse towel, a piece of yellow soap, a tooth brush, and the toilet table is furnished. Now follow him to the dressing-room; a dozen steps down the creek takes him to where a little dam has formed a crystal pool. Down on the moss-covered rocks goes the broad white hat, the collar of the blue flannel shirt is rolled back disclosing the neck and chest of an athlete. Oh how cold, how refreshing, how invigorating the water is, fresh from the snow above. The toilet is finished, breakfast is the next consideration. The coffee having boiled is placed on one side to settle; the bacon fried, the batter for a pile of "slap-jacks" beaten up, he fries one of the abominations, throwing it into the air and catching it on the reversed side with the precision of an old timer, and now he plunges into the tent and emerges with the "chuck box," or in English, "mess chest," into the innermost recesses of which he dives, and from the conglomeration of cartridges, buckskin thongs, steel traps, needles and thread, sailor's palm, mineral specimens, three or four letters, a book very torn and dirty, a pair of Mexican spurs, odds and ends of string, etc., etc., produces a small canvass sack of salt, ditto of sugar, a half gallon can of syrup, and breakfast is ready and the table is set. To dispatch the meal takes but a little while. Short as the time is, however, it is not wasted, for observe the upturned face, the eager searching glance, peak after peak is scanned, formation, color noted, until apparently satisfied with the inspection. The meal is finished, plate and cup washed and put away; the morning pipe is lit and smoked while he goes through his pockets to see if his outfit is complete, matches, compass knife, magnifying glass, all safe. Catching up the burro and picketing him on fresh grass finishes the morning chores and we are ready for the day's work.

Lying.

There is a story of a candidate for a Yorkshire borough addressing the electors in flattering terms, and telling them that for "the hope of being their representative he had given up valuable prospects in India, and travelled many hundreds of miles." "What a jolly fool you must be," was the unsympathetic remark of one of the crowd. The speaker had, in fact, returned to England because his prospects in India had proved delusive. Exaggerators of this class have been held up to derision for centuries. Lando (sixteenth century) tells of an Italian ecclesiastic who was so given to drawing the long bow that his friends openly derided his tales. He at last hired a simple country lad, whose whole duty it was to stand behind his master's chair and corroborate his anecdotes. The boy did his work for a time; but at length his employer ventured on a tale so amazing that the honest servant startled the company by exclaiming, "Nay, master, take back my livery; I cannot swear to that." Epitaphs offer a very usual field for exaggeration. Few imitate the sensible conciseness of an inscription in a Hampshire church, where the survivor merely adds, after the name of the deceased, "To those who knew him a narration of his virtues would be needless; to those who knew him not it would be tedious"—a fact too often lost sight of by the writers of monumental inscriptions.

Facts themselves may be presented in a light which exaggerates them to the listener. Boswell once praised the profuse hospitality of a gentleman who "never entertained less than a thousand in the course of a year. That is to say, about three persons dined with him daily." Both "ways of putting it" were true, but they conveyed widely different meanings.—London Globe.

Peculiarities of Mexicans.

Among all classes there is too much of the idle "rest and be thankful" spirit. Nature has been bountiful; the necessaries of life are easily secured; the need of exertion is minimized; a few beans or a handful of corn, a little fat, and some chillies will form the unvarying diet for weeks. But all are inveterate gamblers. Although sometimes too lazy or improvident to provide even comfortable food, they will sit for hours over cards or dice, and in their infatuation pawn everything on which they can raise money. In selling their chillies, their eggs, poultry, or other produce, they seldom have any fixed price; their demands are mainly graduated by the apparent capacity or generosity of the purchaser. Contracting to supply milk, for example, to the railroad construction gangs, after arranging for a very ample remuneration, and going on for one, perhaps two, weeks, they will complain that their cows are doing badly, get a few extra cents per gallon, and perhaps a week later make a similar stand for a further advance. The mercantile classes in the towns, although they seldom have much capital, are tolerably straitforward, endeavoring to meet their engagements, and have a wholesome horror of a protested bill. Every village celebrates, at least once a year, its fiesta, where dancing, an extra amount of gambling, cock fighting, and sometimes bull-baiting are the entertainments, and where the liberal consumption of cheap intoxicants bring business into the Court of Elcaldi or Justice of Peace. The Mexicans are generally more pusillanimous and superstitious than the Indians. Secret societies exercise a good deal of authority. Both in Old and New Mexico the Penitates count their numbers by thousands, and enjoin among their votaries fasting and humiliation, from which, however, exemption is freely accorded on payment of certain doles. On occasions, self-flageliation and stripes inflicted by brother devotees are proceeded with until the infatuated victims are covered with blood. For several hundred yards along a path thickly strewn with prickly cactus, others go on hands and knees to prostrate themselves before the cross. Bearing a cross weighing several hundred pounds, with arms outstretched and secured, others toil for miles, usually to some sacred chapel or almost inaccessible mountain top. When the poor enthusiast, fainting under his burden, is about to drop, attendants place their shoulders under the arms of the cross, and afford a temporary support. These performances shatter yearly the health of weakly devotees, and kill some.—London Times.

Diseases From Bad Teeth.

It appears not to be generally understood even among the cultivated people, although the fact has been dwelt upon with emphasis by the best medical authorities, that the presence of carious, crowded, or asymmetrical teeth in the human mouth is the progenitor of a long train of nervous diseases, comprising not only facial neuralgia and its concomitant troubles, but diseases of the ear, inflammatory as well as functional, eventuating often in partial loss of hearing, defects of vision, naso-pharyngeal catarrh, and other tormenting maladies. One of our acutest and most successful specialists in the treatment of nervous diseases has become so fully convinced by long experience of the part played by defective teeth in the development, not of neuralgia only, but even of the more obscure neuroses, that he always insists, as a condition precedent to the acceptance of the case, that a thorough examination of the cavity of the mouth shall be undertaken by a competent dentist, for, he says, not only may a single diseased tooth result in persistent nervous disturbance, but disease of the brain, decay or perversion of the mental faculties, even epilepsy and tetanic spasms often have their starting-point in dental irritations; and he has observed cases in which, while laying the foundation for a long train of nervous troubles, the irritated organ itself gave no sign, either by local pain or vague discontent, of the agency it was constantly exerting to produce serious disturbance at some distant point. In common with the most aural surgeons, a distinguished specialist, of this city, has long since adopted the practice of examining the teeth of every patient brought to him for treatment of ear trouble, particularly of partial deafness and general irritation of the organ; and, speaking the other day of the large number of pupils from the public schools who attended the public aural clinics at the hospital with which he is connected, "it is rare," he said, "to find a single patient in whose case dental irritation is not to be considered among the prominent causative factors."—New York Times.

The Philadelphia Times is certainly the most enterprising and probably the most successful newspaper in the United States. On the 13th instant the Times celebrated its eighth anniversary by issuing five distinct papers of the usual size making altogether about fifty-five square feet of printed matter—the one half of which was reading on varied but mostly interesting subjects, while the other was filled with fine display advertising of the leading business houses of Philadelphia. The Times is a big paper and as good as big—there's no rubbing out these facts; but that is not saying that it is absolutely infallible in its views of public men and measures. Even country editors will sometimes take the liberty to differ most decidedly even with the Times.

Mr. Brumm, of Schuylkill county, is the last of the race of greenbackers in the congress. And he will look lonely as Lot's wife. He had better take out letters of admisistration and settle up the final account of the party.

The Ohio Republicans talk of running a certain Mr. R. B. Hayes for Governor of that state. Let them talk and run too, if they wish.

The McVeytown Journal hoists the name of Gov. B. F. Butler, of Massachusetts, for President in 1884.

Judge Dean on Licenses.

Of one hundred and seventy-three applications for liquor license before the courts of Cambria county eighty were refused. In refusing them Judge Dean stated his reasons, in part, as follows: "Taking the applications and the population of the county, to grant all would make one drinking place for about every two hundred and sixty-four inhabitants of the county, including men women and children. Assuming that none but men drink, we deduct four-fifths, leaving a drinking place for every 56 men. Assuming that only one half the men drink, leaves one drinking place for every 28 men over 21 years of age. We doubt if another county in the state shows so large a proportion as this. It is too many taverns for the population."

The floods of the west have, to some degree subsided, but in their wake have left many troublesome and fatal diseases.

The Work of Reform.

No legislature has assembled since the adoption of the new constitution which has accomplished as much in the same space of time as the body now in session. Furthermore it is to be said that more legislation of an important character is under consideration in the present legislature than was ever found on the files of any of its predecessors.

For the first time since the constitution of 1873 became the fundamental law of the state has any effort been made by the legislature to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of that instrument on the subject of discrimination in charges of carrying companies. For the first time in many years have the institutions which are supported by the state's bounty been required to give an account of their expenditures before their appropriations were renewed. For the first time, too, in the history of modern legislatures have useless offices been abolished and the number of officials reduced.

While the legislature is entitled to great credit for this work, and for the origination of some of it, to the suggestions of Governor Pattison's inaugural address and special message much of it is certainly due. The predictions so freely made by certain newspapers that the governor and the legislature would not act in harmony have been thoroughly disproved by the logic of events. In the accomplishment of the reforms for which this legislature will be distinguished the executive and legislative departments have worked together without the remotest sign of discord. This is as it should be and both the legislature and the governor will be applauded for it.—Patriot.

Miscellaneous.

Rev. A. S. Keyser, of Pottsville, was recently tried by a committee of ministers on the charge of breach of promise, found guilty and disposed from his office.

The Ohio style of Treating Bribers.

COLUMBUS, March 12.—The motion for a new trial in the case of J. D. Watson, convicted of offering bribes to Representative Bloch, was overruled to-day and the accused was sentenced to the penitentiary for one year.

One way to pay a State debt.

NASHVILLE, March 15.—The bill to settle the State debt at fifty cents on the dollar, with three per cent. interest, as it came from the House of representatives, to-day passed the Senate and awaits the Governor's signature.

Before dipping a new pen into ink, thrust it into a fresh-cut potato, and the ink will never cling. When the pen is thickly gummed with dried ink, a few thrusts will clean it perfectly. When not in use some accountants leave their pens sticking into a potato kept on the desk for the purpose.

Dr. Gast Found not Guilty.

We copy the following Chester dispatch, dated March 10, from Sunday's Press: "The jury in the case of Samuel Gast, the cancer doctor, charged with manslaughter, in having caused the death of Mrs. James Armstrong, whom he treated for cancer to day returned a verdict of not guilty."—Ex.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

A Stricken Family.

DANVILLE, Pa., March 12.—The family of Daniel Heimbauch, consisting of fourteen persons, living near this place, were attacked with typhoid fever a couple of weeks ago. So malignant was the type that the entire family were down at one time. Two of the children died almost immediately and were buried by the neighbors, not one of the family being able to leave their rooms. Last week the father and two more of the children died and the three were buried in one grave. Three of the remaining are not expected to recover.

A Maryland Preacher's Pie.

From the Dorchester Era.

The members and friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church at East New Market called upon the pastor, Rev. T. O. Ayers, on Saturday night, and presented him a "Dorchester pie." It was a very peculiar sort of pie. The bottom crust was a sack of corn; the top crust was a purse of gold; the filling was made up of sausage, hams, coffee, sugar, cake, lard, fruit, honey, crackers, eggs, jelly, butter, hominy, potatoes, hosiery—yes, a pie with a stocking in it—handkerchiefs, chocolate, catsup, dried fruit, fresh pork, beef, etc. It was a big pie—a whole wagonload of pie.

The Philadelphia Times is certainly the most enterprising and probably the most successful newspaper in the United States. On the 13th instant the Times celebrated its eighth anniversary by issuing five distinct papers of the usual size making altogether about fifty-five square feet of printed matter—the one half of which was reading on varied but mostly interesting subjects, while the other was filled with fine display advertising of the leading business houses of Philadelphia. The Times is a big paper and as good as big—there's no rubbing out these facts; but that is not saying that it is absolutely infallible in its views of public men and measures. Even country editors will sometimes take the liberty to differ most decidedly even with the Times.

Mr. Brumm, of Schuylkill county, is the last of the race of greenbackers in the congress. And he will look lonely as Lot's wife. He had better take out letters of admisistration and settle up the final accouut of the party.

The Ohio Republicans talk of running a certain Mr. R. B. Hayes for Governor of that state. Let them talk and run too, if they wish.

The McVeytown Journal hoists the name of Gov. B. F. Butler, of Massachusetts, for President in 1884.

Judge Dean on Licenses.

Of one hundred and seventy-three applications for liquor license before the courts of Cambria county eighty were refused. In refusing them Judge Dean stated his reasons, in part, as follows: "Taking the applications and the population of the county, to grant all would make one drinking place for about every two hundred and sixty-four inhabitants of the county, including men women and children. Assuming that none but men drink, we deduct four-fifths, leaving a drinking place for every 56 men. Assuming that only one half the men drink, leaves one drinking place for every 28 men over 21 years of age. We doubt if another county in the state shows so large a proportion as this. It is too many taverns for the population."

The floods of the west have, to some degree subsided, but in their wake have left many troublesome and fatal diseases.

The Work of Reform.

No legislature has assembled since the adoption of the new constitution which has accomplished as much in the same space of time as the body now in session. Furthermore it is to be said that more legislation of an important character is under consideration in the present legislature than was ever found on the files of any of its predecessors.

For the first time since the constitution of 1873 became the fundamental law of the state has any effort been made by the legislature to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of that instrument on the subject of discrimination in charges of carrying companies. For the first time in many years have the institutions which are supported by the state's bounty been required to give an account of their expenditures before their appropriations were renewed. For the first time, too, in the history of modern legislatures have useless offices been abolished and the number of officials reduced.

While the legislature is entitled to great credit for this work, and for the origination of some of it, to the suggestions of Governor Pattison's inaugural address and special message much of it is certainly due. The predictions so freely made by certain newspapers that the governor and the legislature would not act in harmony have been thoroughly disproved by the logic of events. In the accomplishment of the reforms for which this legislature will be distinguished the executive and legislative departments have worked together without the remotest sign of discord. This is as it should be and both the legislature and the governor will be applauded for it.—Patriot.

Miscellaneous.

Rev. A. S. Keyser, of Pottsville, was recently tried by a committee of ministers on the charge of breach of promise, found guilty and disposed from his office.

The Ohio style of Treating Bribers.

COLUMBUS, March 12.—The motion for a new trial in the case of J. D. Watson, convicted of offering bribes to Representative Bloch, was overruled to-day and the accused was sentenced to the penitentiary for one year.

One way to pay a State debt.

NASHVILLE, March 15.—The bill to settle the State debt at fifty cents on the dollar, with three per cent. interest, as it came from the House of representatives, to-day passed the Senate and awaits the Governor's signature.

Before dipping a new pen into ink, thrust it into a fresh-cut potato, and the ink will never cling. When the pen is thickly gummed with dried ink, a few thrusts will clean it perfectly. When not in use some accountants leave their pens sticking into a potato kept on the desk for the purpose.

Dr. Gast Found not Guilty.

We copy the following Chester dispatch, dated March 10, from Sunday's Press: "The jury in the case of Samuel Gast, the cancer doctor, charged with manslaughter, in having caused the death of Mrs. James Armstrong, whom he treated for cancer to day returned a verdict of not guilty."—Ex.

Price 25 cents a bottle.

A Stricken Family.

DANVILLE, Pa., March 12.—The family of Daniel Heimbauch, consisting of fourteen persons, living near this place, were attacked with typhoid fever a couple of weeks ago. So malignant was the type that the entire family were down at one time. Two of the children died almost immediately and were buried by the neighbors, not one of the family being able to leave their rooms. Last week the father and two more of the children died and the three were buried in one grave. Three of the remaining are not expected to recover.

A Maryland Preacher's Pie.

From the Dorchester Era.

The members and friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church at East New Market called upon the pastor, Rev. T. O. Ayers, on Saturday night, and presented him a "Dorchester pie." It was a very peculiar sort of pie. The bottom crust was a sack of corn; the top crust was a purse of gold; the filling was made up of sausage, hams, coffee, sugar, cake, lard, fruit, honey, crackers, eggs, jelly, butter, hominy, potatoes, hosiery—yes, a pie with a stocking in it—handkerchiefs, chocolate, catsup, dried fruit, fresh pork, beef, etc. It was a big pie—a whole wagonload of pie.

The Millheim Journal.

THURSDAY, MARCH 22ND, 1883.

BY DEININGER & BUMILLER.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

—A fine line of Easter cards for Sunday schools just received at the JOURNAL STORE.

—Mr. Wm. Pealer left our town and Mr. Snook's employ last week. Sorry to lose such a good, genial fellow, but we cannot help it—else we would.

—Judge Frank has taken out letters of administration on the estate of Samuel Winter, deceased. See notice in another column.

FOR SALE.—Rev. C. F. Deininger offers his valuable property in Millheim at private sale. For particulars inquire of H. K. Luse, on the premises. tf

—The flitting season has already opened and the teams loaded with household goods too numerous to mention are passing to and fro every day.

—The Lewisburg Chronicle calls the hanging of Jonathan Moyer a technicality. In exactness and refined cruelty that beats any lawyer we ever heard.

—Mr. Jacob Gephart's tobacco crop is now all "stripped and ready for market." Jacob has about four and a half tons of the weed on hand and it is worth at present prices about $1000.

—Mrs. C. A. Sturgis is here on a visit to her parents. Her health is somewhat impaired and she came home to recruit. Her condition has already improved considerably.

—If you have a class in Sunday School and wish to present them with beautiful Easter cards—or in fact any other kind of cards—the JOURNAL STORE is the place to get your supplies.

—The Methodist congregation of Mifflinburg raised $2,552.04 last year, $1,300 of which was applied to pay off a debt on the parsonage. Rev. A. M. Barnitz is the efficient pastor.

—Capital and labor seem to get along very harmoniously at Mann's Axe Factory, near Bellefonte. Some of the workmen have been engaged there for forty successive years.

—The matrimonial business is booming just now. Pastor Tomlinson spliced no less than three couples one evening last week, while a fourth one could not be served and had to get another minister.

—If some of our farmer subscribers have more corn than cash, they can settle their subscriptions in corn—and it makes no difference to the printer whether it be for arrears, in advance, or for the current year. tf

—Our friend Val. Breon will take charge of the old Musser mill, in April, and Frank Richards expects to run the brick mill. Both are excellent millers. Mr. Meyer intends to make a trip to the west.

—Barber Springer has to get himself an assistant. The young man is a nephew of Jacob, hails from Selinsgrove and answers to the name of George L. Springer. He is bright and active and takes to the business quite naturally.

—If Millheim can not get up an axe factory, woolen mills, or other manufactory establishment let us try to raise a quoiting club. It would at least be something in the line of enterprise, and we doubt not that a united effort would insure success.

MUSIC.—Vocal and instrumental music practically and theoretically taught in the Musical College at Freeburg, Pa. A session of six weeks begins Tuesday, May 1st, 1883. Address
F. C. MOYER,
3t Musical Director.

—The Bellefonte Republican is out of humor with the bad music and singing prevailing in that town and says "the choirs in our churhes are ridiculously inadequate to the demands of the occasion—some are not even worthy of the name." Now that's bad of brother Tuten to talk so, but who would have thunk it?

—Next Monday the new mercantile firm of Pealer & Long will start up business in Mr. Kunk's store building at the iron bridge, Spring Mills. Both these gentlemen possess practical business training and have financial and social standing, which are the prime factors to success. They have our best wishes in their new enterprise.

—J. A. Limbert is really one of the most accommodating and reliable fellows that ever drove a stage. Throughout the year he carries a very large amount of express goods all along the route, and delivers them in person.

Everything is always right and his charges are really moderate. You can safely entrust our business to him. tf

—Mr. Jonathan Weaver, a substantial and well to-do citizen of the Farmers' Mills neighborhood died the other Wednesday. Mr. Weaver was an honest, upright man, a good neighbor and an active member of the church. On Sunday his remains were laid to rest at the Union Church. The funeral was attended by many sorrowing relatives and friends. Rev. W. E. Fisher preached a comforting sermon.

—The project of building a large new flouring mill at Lewisburg looks like success. Judge Hoffa, Geo. S. Matlack, W. D. Himmelreich, a Mr. Follmer, of Milton and the firm of Heaton, Hunter & Tayler, of Ashland—all rich fellows—constitute the company.

—They had a little wreck at Coburn on Saturday morning by which a car loaded with grain was thrown down the embaukment and emptied of its contents. It was caused by the spreading of the track. The same train collided with a cow at Fowler and the poor cow got the worst of it.

—In looking around for any kind of Parlor or Kitchen Furniture, whether needed in entire suits or only single articles, do not forget that Squire Camp, at Centre Hall, can furnish you as well and as cheaply as you can be accommodated anywhere in this part of the state. The squire understands his business thoroughly and will sell you good work at the lowest possible prices. Give him a call.

—Rev. Benj. Hengst, the new preacher, gave us a call on Saturday. As a minister and theologian, Mr. H. is much above the average in ability, while as a man he is one of those few exceptionally kind and genial spirits who seem never to have an enemy in the wide world. Wherever he labors he is not only popular in the current meaning of the term, but really beloved by the entire community. Welcome.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION.—The undersigned will again resume his work of teaching and will give lessons on Piano or Organ at reasonable rates. The spring term will begin the first week in April. Persons residing in Aaronsburg, Millheim, Rebersburg or in the vicinity of any of these places, who are desirous of taking lessons will please write or apply in person to WM. T. MEYER, 3t Aaronsburg, Pa.

—We clip the following from the Patriot of Monday last. Rumors had been afloat concerning this matter for some time, but for want of something definite and tangible the JOURNAL refrained from making reference to it. We hope Grant may be able to establish his innocence, not only for his own sake but for the sake of a highly respected father:

On Tuesday the inspectors arrested Grant Shafer on a charge of robbing the post office at Madisonburg on January 1, 1883. The prisoner was taken before the United States commissioner at Bellefonte, and after a hearing was held in $800 bail for trial at the session of the United States court at Williamsport, commencing the third Monday of June next.

—Mrs. Nancy S. Tuten, mother of Mr. E. T. Tuten, of the Bellefonte Republican, departed this life at the home of her son, Wednesday the 14th inst., in the 63rd year of her age. Mrs. Tuten was a christian lady of excellent qualities of head and heart, and died in full hope and faith of immortal life. Some thirty years ago her husband died, leaving a widow with six children to provide for and educate, a task which she performed with true heroic devotion and exceptional success.

The remains were transported for interment to her former home in New Hampshire, on Thursday, accompanied by her affectionate son, to whom we express our condolence and sympathy in his bereavement.

—We clip the following item from the Harrisburg Patriot of the 13th inst., whichshows that our townsmen, Messrs. S. K. Sankey & Co., are availing themselves of a very liberal offer by the citizens of Duncannon, Pa., to locate their agricultural implement works at that place:

A New Industry at Duncannon.

A PATRIOT reporter, in conversation with J. E. Scheibley of this city, general agent for the machine and foundry department of the Harrisburg car company, learns that the enterprising citizens of Duncannon have donated three acres of land and one thousand five hundred dollars in cash to Messrs. S. K. Sankey & Co., of Millheim, Centre county, Pa., as an inducement to have them locate their agricultural works at Duncannon, affording them unusual facilities, being located along the line of the Pennsylvania railroad and in close proximy to the junction of the two rivers and Pennsylvania canal. The buildings are under way and will be completed by the 1st of July 1883.

—PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for April is already on our table, as welcome as the flowers of Spring, and quite as fresh and beautiful. The embellishments, as usual, are very fine, particularly the steel-plate, "A Modern Cinderella;" the colored steel fashion-plate; and the colored pattern in crewels, a bunch of dog-daisies. But the specialty of the number is its stories, which, though always superior in "Peterson," are better this month than ever. Mr. Benedict's novelet, "A Professional Beauty," is alone worth the subscription price. Then there is one of "Josiah Allen's Wife's" humorous sketches. "In Kittery," by the author of "The Second Life," is also such as one rarely reads. The illustrated story, "My First Ball-Dress," is charmingly told; and so is the romantic "Modern Cinderella." All the Spring fashions are given in advance, and the fashion cuts, work-table cuts, etc., etc. are without number. No lady should be without this magazine. It is not too late to subscribe for 1883, as all the back numbers can be supplied, if desired. The price is but two dollars, and to clubs it is much cheaper. Specimens are sent, gratis, to those wishing to get up clubs, and handsome premiums are given for getting them up. Subscribe at once. Address CHAS. J. PETERSON, 306 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WOODWARD NEWS.

Mr. David Krape bought the old Motz homestead here, together with some land. George Vonada bought a small tract of the timberland and J. C. Motz got the balance of the Motz property. The heirs had a family and settlement meeting which was attended by Mrs. Sarah C. Neff and Mrs. C. A. Weaver and son Luther.

Mr. Emanuel Motz, after an absence of nearly a year, during which he made a trip to Europe, was also here on a visit. Man looks just splendid and is chock full of news. His business to England was to negotiate the sale of his gold mine in South Carolina, and though he failed therein by reason of the unsettled financial state of affairs in England, yet he struck another bonanza which promises as rich a financial harvest as most gold mines. He brought his rare scientific knowledge to bear on the improvement of electric light, and the result is what he calls the Incandescent Electric Lamp. By this improvement the light is much increased, the rays are concentrated and can be thrown on any desired point. All damage by explosion is avoided.

Mr. Motz has already taken out letters patent both in England and the United States, for his important invention, and his prospects for an early and general introduction of it are very flattering. He is now negotiating with the officers of the Pennsylvania R. R. Co. for its use by that giant corporation.

DUKES.

THE MURDERER ACQUITTED.

The trial of N. L. Dukes, for the murder of Capt. A. C. Nutt, Cashier of the State Treasury, began at Uniontown, Fayette county, Monday the 12th inst., and ended on Wednesday evening following in the acquittal of the murderer.

The general circumstances of the case are still familiar to the public, but the infamous letters of Dukes to Capt. Nutt, and the incensed reply of the latter to Dukes were only made public during the trial. Dukes is a practicing lawyer of some prominence at Uniontown, and was last fall elected a member of the legislature; but the murder of Capt. Nutt with all the horrid circumstances connected with it, prove him a villain of the basest kind. Dukes had paid attentions to Miss Lizzie, a daughter of Capt. Nutt, a intervals for several years, and after having debased her wrote a letter to her father, then at Harrisburg, revealing to him the state of his daughter, coupled with an intimation how he could save her and his family from disgrace. It would be difficult to find a parallel to this letter for baseness and infamy. The indignant and outraged father replied to Dukes in a spirit and tenor that left no room to doubt his feeling and intentions. He puts the alternative to Dukes to marry the girl or take the risk of the consequences. This Dukes flatly & insultingly refused to do in a second letter to Capt. Nutt, although he again admitted his criminal relation to Lizzie, in language that would drive any father who had even a spark of honor, to desperation. Then followed the fatal meeting between the two men in Duke's room at Uniontown, on the morning of Dec. 24th. They first had a scuffle but had been seperated, and were standing about eight feet apart, Capt. Nutt resting his elbow on the mantle, exhausted by the scuffle, when the fatal shot fell. He lived only half an hour but could not talk. When the dreadful news spread over the town the excitement and indignation were intense. Violence was freely threatened but Dukes was already safe inside the prison walls.

During the three days' trial the court house was literally packed with people. The evidence, the masterly plea of Hon. W. H. Playford as well as the able charge of Judge Wilson, all pointed to the conviction of the murderer, either in first or second degree, but when the jury brought in their shameful verdict of "Not guilty" the disappointment and indignation were general and knew no bounds. Judge Wilson seemed amazed and said to the jury:

"I suppose the verdict that you have rendered is one that you thought you should render under your oaths, but it is one that gives dissatisfaction to the Court, because we thought the evidence was sufficient to justify you in rendering a different verdict. If you have committed an error, it is one that we cannot avoid, but can only express our condemnation of it in this mild way. The prisoner is discharged."

The crowd rushed out, but waited about the halls to see the acquitted man start out. He started down the back way, but remained concealed on the stairway while his counsel passed out the other way, and the crowd, seeing him go, in a measure dispersed. On the streets indignation at the verdict ran high. An impromptu procession formed at once and paraded the streets with a rude effigy of Dukes upon a pole and crying his name with oaths and jeers. The threats of lynching were freely made. Dukes sought the protection of the Sheriff, and closeted himself in the jail building for the night.

The jurors disappeared in the confusion the minute they were discharged, and, alarmed at at the threats of tar and feathers that greeted them as they passed through the crowd, sought security away from the hotels and the streets. It has been impossible to see them since.

The effigy of Dukes, after being carried in procession through the town, was hanged upon a tree before the McClelland House, the crowd singing:

"We'll hang Lyman Dukes on a sour apple tree"

Meanwhile the sober-minded men were giving expression to their feelings in an other way. A paper was rapidly circulated, calling an indignation meeting next day of all who are jealous of the reputation of Fayette county. It was hurriedly signed and posted through the town and neighborhood.

The Indignation Meeting.

UNIONTOWN, March 15.—Owing to the cold and blustering weather to-day grave thoughts were entertained of the success of the meeting called to express the indignation of the community touching the verdict of the jury acquitting Dukes of the murder of Captain Nutt. The assemblage was to have convened on the post office corner, but the blasts were to wintry, so it was decided to have it in the public school hall. In ten minutes after the ringing of the school house bell there was not standing room in the hall. People of all classes, conditions and creed and of every party flocked there. Many were unable to gain admission. Captain John Bierer was called to preside. He spoke for about ten minutes. He rev.ewed the character of Captain Nutt in his relations to society and his family. He dwelt upon the deep damnation of his taking off, and when he came to speak of the jurors who acquitted his assassin, no words were too strong in which to frame his powerful condemnation of their acts. When he affirmed his abiding belief in the absolute purity of the young girl whom Dukes had so vitally traduced his audience burst into a storm of applause, which clearly indicated how fully his sentiments were received. A special train from Connellsville had brought large delegations from that place, Dunbar and intermediate points on the Southwest railway. While Mr. Biever was speaking and the enthusiasm of the meeting was rising to a high pitch, C. H. Beall, of this place, capped the climax by rising to his feet and declaring, "I was born in Maryland and am damned glad of it. I don't belong to Fayette county."

TEXT OF THE RESOLUTIONS.

The following are the resolutions which were unanimously adopted.

WHEREAS, A great public calamity has befallen us. An esteemed citizen has fallen by the hand of the base traducer of the honor of his family, and with shame and humiliation be it said a jury has been found in Fayette county so grossly disqualified for the proper discharge of their high trust to make exemption from punishment a premium upon crime.

Resolved, That the acquittal of N. L. Dukes, the murderer of Captain Nutt, by a Fayette county jury, is a reproach to the intelligence and decency of our people and destroys public confidence in the intelligence and purity of the decisions of the jury box.

Resolved, That in the light of the recent verdict acquitting N. L. Dukes a Fayette county jury has proclaimed license and protection to the libertine and assassin, and has brought dismay to the hearthstone of every household.

Resolved, That the methods adopted by N. L. Dukes and some of his friends to thwart public justice by packing and trammeling the jury before which he was tried are worthy of the betrayer of youthful innocence and the apologists of seduction and murder.

Resolved, That we demand exemption from the partisan efforts of public officers to tamper with the behest of justice and offer as the only alternative the bloody arena at the shrine of Judge Lynch.

Resolved, That we tender the Hon. Alphonse Wilson sincere thanks for the able and impartial discharge of his duties during the trial of this case, and assure him that the mortification and disgust entertained by every good citizen at the nefarious verdict from the jury box is assuaged by an honest pride in the intelligence, impartiality and manliness displayed from the bench.

Resolved, That we offer sincere condolence to the widow and orphan children of A. C. Nutt; bereft of a kind husband and tender parent, may they be consoled by the assurance that the memory of their dead will be embalmed in the affection of a host of living friends when the deserted memory and blood stained hands of N. L. Dukes have perished from the face of the earth.

Resolved, That we offer our heartiest thanks to Hon. William H. Playford, I. L. Johnson and A. D. Boyd, esqs., for the able and eloquent efforts which they made to secure a verdict in accordance with the law and the evidence, and to prevent this shame from coming on our county, and regret that their words wasted as pearl before swine upon a jury who defiled alike the court, the evidence, and their oaths before God.

The reading of the resolutions was frequently interrupted by prolonged outbreaks of enthusiasm. When Rev. Kerr had finished the audience vociferously demanded a speech from him, and to their reqest he readily assented. He said that words would fail to express the intensity of his feeling over the outrageous act of twelve men who had pretended to do their sworn duty. Well may parents tremble for their daughters when twelve men can be found who are so base, so lost to all sense of manhood, decency and honor as to render directly contrary to all the evidence, the verdict which acquitted Lyman Dukes of the murder of Captain Nutt and of the responsibility for the terrible blot which he had attempted to put upon the fair name of his dear family. May the names of these jurors go down to posterity as the black list of Fayette county, to be remembered only with feelings of shame and inexpressible disgust, to be remembered throughout the state as those who had committed the monumental act of infamy; and as for Nicholas Lyman Dukes, may he go forth to learn, as Cain did, what it is to bear upon his brow the brand of a murderer. May he learn that there is a punishment which no bribery can avert and no treachery turn aside. Let him go forth to learn that when he shall stand in the presence of purity and innocence his conscience shall sting him and accuse him of the lowest forms of licentiousness and debauchery. Let him learn that the hand that penned such letters as he wrote to Captain Nutt is the hand of a cowardly assassin, the hand of a man unworthy a place among honest and upright people. Let him learn that all in all he is a man who would shame the most abandoned inhabitant of the infernal regions.

The scene created by Rev. Kerr's address was absolutely indescribable. Again, and again, and again was it cheered and applauded. The furore was so great that it shook the walls of the building. The impression which followed Rev. Kerr's speech was that nothing more remained to be said. So the meeting quietly dissolved, feeling that at least something had been done toward retrieving the fair name of Fayette county.

HARRISBURG, March 14.

The news of the acquittal of Dukes has excited the Capital. In hotel lobbies and at street corners disappointed and indignant legislators, both Republicans and Democrats, openly declare the trial a farce and the verdict an outrage against the Commonwealth. The democrats are particularly disgusted and say that he shall not sit with them in the House. They do not believe that they can prevent him from taking the oath as a member, but if he should take that step they are determined to expel him.

A Dukes' Juror Badly Beaten.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 16.—A Uniontown, Pa. special says N. L. Dukes, the murderer of Capt. Nutt, is at his mother's home in German township. A reporter visited him this p. m., to whom he expressed great satisfaction with the verdict. He also stated that he contemplates claiming his seat in the state legislature and will remain in the county and practice law. Another dispatch says Jacob A. Amabong, one of the jurors who tried Dukes, was assaulted on the streets of Belle Vernon this evening and so badly beaten that his life is despaired of.

MARRIED.

On the 15th inst., at the Lutheran Parsonage, Aaronsburg, Pa., by Rev. John Tomlinson, Mr. G. H. Harter, of Spring Mills, and Miss Louisa Breon, of Penn township.

At the same time and place by the same, Mr. G. B. Crawford, and Miss Mary E. Fetterlof, both of Spring Mills.

At the same time and place by the same, Mr. George N. Erhard and Miss Mary E. Musser, both of Haines township.

On the 15th inst., at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. E. D. Keene, Mr. W. E. Keene, of Millheim and Miss Sadie J. Stover, daughter of Mr. Noah Stover, of Haines township.

Still another one that will call us "Uncle Ben," but where will this thing end at this rate? Three brothers getting married within twenty-one days—Warren on the 22nd ult., Man on the 8th inst., and Bill, the last but by no means the least, on the 15th. That exhausts the list on the boys' side and young ladies must now look for husbands somewhere else. The Keenes are all as far as we know.

We hope this last couple, as well as the other two, may fare well and do well. They all have the JOURNAL'S best wishes. As far as the cake is concerned, our own and the other editor's wife agree to pronounce it "just splendid"—and they both know exactly what they are speaking of.

DIED.

On the 16th inst., in Gregg township, Jonathan Weaver, aged 58 years, 4 months and 20 days.

FOR THE FARM AND HOME.

Spitting Out Food.

When an animal chews its food and spits it out—which is called quidding—it indicates a diseased, overgrown, or injured tooth. This interference with the mastication produces indigestion and failure of condition, but these effects will soon disappear when the cause is removed. The teeth should be examined and those that are found disordered in any way treated as may be needed. If the edges are sharp or project, they should be rasped and smoothed, or, if requisite, the tooth should be removed. The trouble will then cease.

Starting Plants Early.

A German paper gives the following interesting method of starting plants early: The seeds of peas, beans, cucumbers, etc., are started in a frame, and when a little grown are lifted and the roots dipped in a mixture of clay, chopped moss, water and loam, and on withdrawal are sprinkled with firm, dry earth. A piece of moss is then flattened into the form of a plate and a little earth sprinkled on it. The prepared plants are then placed on this plate, the moss folded over the roots, tied on so as to form a little ball and set away on boards or shelves, until the season for removing to the open air comes, when they are planted, pot and all, which gives them an early start.

Root Pruning.

The experiments were made on the apple and pear. A vigorous apple tree, eight or ten years old, which had scarcely made any fruit buds, has done best when about half the roots were cut in one season and half three years later, by going half way round on opposite sides in one year and finishing at the next pruning, working two feet underneath to sever downward roots. It always answered well also to cut from such trees all the larger and longer roots about two feet and a half from the stem, leaving the small and weaker ones longer, and going half way round, as already stated. The operation was repeated three or four years later by extending the cut circle a foot or two further away from the tree. By this operation unproductive fruit trees become thickly studded with fruit spurs and afterward bore profusely. This shortening of the roots has been continued in these experiments for twenty years with much success, the circle of roots remaining greatly circumscribed. The best time for the work has been found to be in the latter part of August and beginning of September, when growth has nearly ceased and while the leaves are yet on the trees, causing greater increase of bloom buds the following year than when performed after the leaves had fallen.—London Garden.

Farm and Garden Notes.

White clover generally springs up where bones are applied on old pastures.

It is easier to grow rhubarb from the seed than to get old roots, as these seldom give satisfaction.

It appears from Pliny's description that the rhododendron of the ancients, so poisonous to animal life, was what we call oleander.

Soot is quick in its action without being too stimulating and makes an excellent top-dressing for spring grain and grass. It will destroy slugs on winter grain.

As to the management of the hydrangea in spring, cut all the branches well back, and dig in some good manure around the plant, and keep it well hoed during summer.

Camellias raised from seed will blossom as certainly as any other plant raised in that way. Budding and grafting do not cause plants to bloom; these operations are employed to propagate varieties.

Dr. Sturtevant says in cutting a potato for seed it seems, so far as he at present knows, to be advantageous to prepare the seed a few days in advance to use and to place in such a position that their cut surfaces shall, to a certain extent, become dry.

Tomatoes will not do well on a poor, stiff soil. The fruit will be small in size and quantity and poor in flavor. For rich flavor and smooth fruit, manure the soil with well-rotted stable manure plowed under. Unleached wood ashes makes a good additional dressing.

Receipts

Tomato Hash.—Chop cold roast beef or boiled beefsteak very fine. Put a minced onion and a tea-cupful of tomatoes on to boil. When the onion and tomatoes are thoroughly done, add the beef, a small piece of butter, pepper and salt to taste. Serve scalding hot.

Orange Pudding.—Two large oranges pared and cut in pieces one inch square, put in the bottom of a pudding dish, pour over them one cup of white sugar; then make a plain corn starch pudding without sugar and pour it over the orange and sugar. Let stand and cool.

Household Hints.

Those who have remnants of plush can take them to the picture frames to be made into plush frames and easels.

A thin coat of varnish applied to straw matting will make it much more durable; and keep the matting fresh and new.

Soot falling on the carpet from open chimneys or carelessly handled stove-pipes, if thickly covered with salt, can be brushed up without injury to the carpet.

FORESTS AND FLOODS.

The Destruction of the Former the Cause of the Latter.

Many persons assume that a great flood contradicts the theory that cutting away forests causes exceptionally low water in the denuded country. The truth is, the destruction of the woods means water courses to run extraordinarily low and high, according to the season. In 1881 we had the lowest water ever known in the Ohio, and to-day we have the highest water ever known. These extremes equally illustrate the theory we urge upon the attention of the people.

The reasons are perfectly distinct. Take a mass of mountains on the Alleghany, Monongahela or Kanawha. Let us suppose them clothed with trees from the foot to the crown, and with underbrush and mosses, with beds of half-decayed leaves, resting upon soil that represents deposits of leaves and vegetable growth for thousands of years. Each mountain is an enormous sponge. The rain may fall for days, and the greater part is absorbed, saturating the soil, the grass, the leaves, lingering in the bushes and the trees. The half-decayed logs will hold barrels of water, and for weeks after a heavy rain the moisture is trickling away in thousands of flush springs. Cut away the trees—the underbrush perishes, the moss is dried up, the soil washed away and the rocks are exposed. The rains descend, and the mountains shed the water like the roofs of houses. All that falls makes its way into the torrents at once. Take a thousand mountains at the head-waters of the Ohio, and reduce them to barrenness, and it follows that the river is lower in dry weather and higher in wet weather, and more and more subject to extremes of high and low water.

Europe is suffering more from floods than in former generations. They are the clearly-traced results of the destruction of forests, and made more destructive by a system of levees that are equally false and futile. The experience of Hungary and northern Italy is especially instructive. The preservation of mountains from destruction; that is, from becoming utterly barren—a desolation of rocks—is a duty that public safety demands. The greater part of Switzerland would have been uninhabitable long ago if it had not been for the systematic cultivation and preservation of forests. There are many mountain sides in Switzerland that are wonderfully supported by trees and shrubbery, cared for with a full appreciation of their importance.

The wasteful, reckless cutting of trees, and carelessness, or worse, in burning away woodlands, must stop, for it is a public mischief. Forest culture in the mountains is needed; and the whole trouble is not in the higher lands. The hillsides must be cared for, as well. There is a way of plowing them that is conservative—and when there is a tendency to wash they should be supported by grasses. Here the rotation of crops comes in, the preservation of brooks by the cultivation of willows, the restoration of land that is growing ragged under the rains by the native forest trees, or, if the case is bad, trees of quick growth. A magnificent forest of black locust can be raised from the sprouts in from fifteen to twenty years.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Hearing in Insects.

The sense of hearing in insects has been recently studied by Herr Gruber. He found the cockroach very sensitive. On sounding a violin-note when a cockroach was running across the floor the creature always suddenly stopped. Again: a number of these cockroaches were inclosed in a glass vessel, and on making a strong sound there was evident agitation and excitement; some would fall down from the glass as if paralyzed. A cockroach was hung by a thread from its hind leg; when it was quiet a bow was drawn sharply over the violin-strings at the distance of about four feet, whereupon the insect was greatly excited, and struggled round, getting its head uppermost. Beetles also were readily affected by sounds, but grubs and ants gave no certain indications. Of aquatic insects various kinds of Corixa were tried. These would often remain quite quiet for several minutes, but, on tapping the glass with a glass tube, they rushed about in much agitation. A disk at the end of a long rod, drawn to and fro in the water near a quiet Corixa, produced no effect; but, on conducting the sound of a struck bell into the liquid by the rod, there was lively reaction; similarly when a glass bell, stroked with a bow, was brought to touch the water. These creatures were also sensitive to high violin-notes in air, to the sound of a metal plate struck with a hammer, etc. Still more sensitive to sound were various aquatic beetles. On the other hand, various larvæ, especially of Ephemerides, were unaffected; but these were sensitive to mechanical agitation of the water. Herr Gruber considers the response the insects made to sound an indication of true hearing, and not mere reflex action.

SCIENTIFIC SCRAPS.

French photographs of the transit in Algeria and spectroscopic observations indicate an atmosphere on the planet.

An apparatus for recording the exact speed of a train during its entire run, including stoppages and startings, has been invented by M. Pouzet.

There is a tree in Arizona which, when seasoned, is so hard as to turn the edge of an ax. It is known as the desert-ironwood tree, and makes magnificent charcoal.

Milk has the power to absorb obnoxious gases and effluvia from the air around it, and it should not be forgotten that the purest butter ever made may become tainted and poisoned in one short hour by objectionable surroundings.

If M. Risler made correct observations, the wheat plant never grows upon any day when the temperature of the air does not for a period of several hours at least rise above forty-three degrees Fahrenheit.

A visitor to the St. Bernard morgue writes that in the wondrous air of the Alps, 8000 feet above the sea-level, putrefaction is unknown, and the bodies of those lost in the snow are perfectly preserved from change.

A non-conductor of electricity has yet to be found, for all substances hitherto discovered are conductors of the force under certain known conditions; but those which offer a great resistance to it serve the purpose of non-conductors in practice, although they may be all classed as good or bad conductors. The best conductor known at present is silver; the worst conductor is solid paraffine.

Dr. Merkel states that the hight of an individual after a night's rest, measured before rising from the bed, is two inches greater than it is in the evening, measured standing. There is a gradual diminution in hight, caused by the yielding of the plantar arches and of the intervertebral discs; and a sudden diminution, when the individual rises, occurring at the articulations of the lower extremities. The sinking at the ankle is one-third of an inch; at the knee, one-twelfth to one-eighth of an inch; at the hip two-fifths of an inch. The shortening at the ankle is probably due to the elasticity of the cartilages. At the top there is, in addition, a sinking of the head of the femur into the cotyloid cavity

A Man in Stays.

Mr. Richard A. Procter, a well-known lecturer on astronomy, once tried the experiment of wearing a corset, and thus describes the results: "When the subject of corset wearing was under discussion in the pages of The English Mechanic, I was struck," he says, "with the apparent weight of evidence in favor of tight lacing. I was in particular struck by the evidence of some as to its use in reducing corpulence. I was corpulent. I also was disposed, as I am still, to take an interest in scientific experiment. I thought I would give it a fair trial. I read all the instructions, carefully followed them, and varied the time of applying pressure with that 'perfectly stiff busk' about which correspondents were so enthusiastic. I was foolish enough to try the thing for a matter of four weeks. Then I laughed at myself as a hopeless idiot, and determined to give up the attempt to reduce by artificial means that superabundance of fat on which only starvation and much exercise, or the air of America, has ever had any real reducing influence. But I was reckoning without my host. As the Chinese lady suffers, I am told, when her feet-bindings are taken off, and as the flat-headed baby howls when his head boards are removed, so for a little while was it with me. I found myself manifestly better in stays. I laughed at myself no longer. I was too angry with myself to laugh. I would as soon have condemned myself to using crutches all the time, as to wearing always a busk. But for my one month of folly I had to endure three months of discontent. At the end of about that time I was my own man again."

A Submarine Army of Torpedoes.

A remarkable means of defense is known as the "Graydon-Leach system," and provides for the maneuvering of fleets or torpedoes under complete control, below the surface of the water, and admitting of entire or partial withdrawal at pleasure, to permit the passing of friendly vessels, or enticing hostile vessels within the limits and then surrounding them with torpedoes that will insure their destruction. The torpedoes can be massed, moved in various directions, and, in fact, maneuvered similarly to bodies of troops, and, being entirely submerged, give no signs of approach to the enemy. The system is comparatively inexpensive, and the plan simple. No hostile fleet could enter a harbor defended by it, and therefore its novelty, simplicity and practibility render it very valuable. Though we have at present no adequate means of defense for our coast and seaport cities, yet by this system of torpedo defense a hostile fleet could be kept beyond shelling distance of New York, Brooklyn, San Francisco or any of our seaport cities, and even the mouth of Chesapeake Bay can be easily rendered impassible.—Our Continent.

To Restore Fading Flowers.

Should the flowers be much withered and beyond the efficacy of cold water readily to restore, plunge their stalks about an inch deep into scalding water, and by the time the water becomes cold the flowers will be restored and fresh. Cut off the ends of the stalks which have been softened by the scalding water, and restore the flowers to the vases in cold water.

Important Proclamation.

The Hon. Peter Bowe is Sheriff of the City and County of New York. Recently, in conversation with one of our reporters, Mr. Bowe proclaimed the following fact; "I consider St. Jacobs Oil an excellent remedy, and one that ought certainly to find its way into every household. Mrs. Bowe always has a bottle of it there, and makes a family remedy of it."—New York Evening Telegram.

"FEMALE COMPLAINTS."

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—I write to tell you what your "Favorite Prescription" has done for me. I had been a great sufferer from female complaints, especially "dragging-down," for over six years during much of the time unable to work. I paid out hundreds of dollars without any benefit till I took three bottles of the "Favorite Prescription," and I never had any thing do me so much good in my life. I advise every sick lady to take it.

Nothing Like It.

No medicine has ever been known so effectual in the cure of all those diseases arising from an impure condition of the blood as Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup for the cure of Scrofula, White Swellings, Rheumatism, Pimples, Blotches, Eruptions, Venereal Sores and Diseases, Consumption, Goitre, Boils, Cancers, and all kindred diseases. It purifies the system, brings color to the cheeks and restores the sufferer to a normal condition of health and vigor.

It is asserted that the ordinary cosmetics used by ladies are productive of great mischief. We believe this is so, and that a better means of securing a beautiful complexion is to use some good blood medicine like Scovill's Blood and Liver Syrup which cleanses the blood and gives permanent beauty to the skin.

Rejoice, Rejoice, "He is Alive Again." "Was Lost, but is Found."

Under date of July 9, 1882, E. B. Enright, of Windsor Locks, Conn., writes a plain, modest narrative, which, from its very simplicity, has the true ring of fine gold. He says: "My father is using Hunt's Remedy and seems to be improving, in fact, he is very much better than he has been for a long time. He had been tapped three times. The first time they got from him sixteen quarts of water, the second time thirteen quarts, and fully as much more the third time, and he would constantly fill up again every time after he had been tapped, until he commenced using Hunt's Remedy, which acted like magic in his case, as he began to improve at once, and now his watery accumulation passes away through the secretions naturally, and he has none of that swelling or filling up which was so frequent before the functions of the kidneys were restored by the use of Hunt's Remedy. He is a well-known citizen of this place, and has always been in business here."

Again he writes, November 27, 1882:

"I beg most cheerfully and truthfully to state, in regard to Hunt's Remedy, that its use was the saving of my father's life. I spoke to you in my previous letter in regard to his being tapped three times. It is the most remarkable case that has ever been heard of in this section. For a man of his years (sixty years) it is a most remarkable cure. He had been unable to attend to his business more than a year, and was given up by the doctors. The first bottle of Hunt's Remedy that he used gave instant relief. He has used in all seven bottles, and continues to use it whenever he feels drowsy or sluggish, and it affords instant relief. He is now attending to his regular business and has been several months. I am perfectly willing that you should publish this letter, as we thoroughly believe that father's life was saved by using Hunt's Remedy and these facts given above may be a benefit to others suffering in like manner from diseases or inaction of the kidneys and liver."
